

Columbia Has Long Drill in Preparation for Cornell Game

Blue and White Works Under Artificial Light and With "Ghost Ball"; Canapary Wins Halfback Berth and Gehrig Is Shifted to Guard Position

Columbia's football team was put through a long drill yesterday afternoon at Baker Field as a starter for the big objective of the year, the battle with Cornell at Ithaca on Saturday. The squad worked out long after dark with the field flooded with light from a battery of about thirty powerful electric lights glaring down from the trees. In addition to making use of the light for the first time this year, the "ghost ball," i.e., a football painted white, made its initial appearance.

Practice sessions will probably go on long after dark for the remaining games north to do battle with Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, and a squad of about thirty players will leave the city on Thursday night and will probably entrain for a little town near the Red machine's bailiwick. The group is scheduled to arrive Friday morning.

One big shift was made in yesterday's line-up, which will probably be the same, who will play on the line and in the backfield. Frank Canapary, captain of the Blue and White team in 1919 and star all-around back, was at right half on the varsity in place of Lou Gehrig. Gehrig was shifted to a guard position in place of Franklin Brodil, who was injured slightly in Saturday's contest with Williams. Brodil will probably be back in the line-up to day at left guard, which means that Kess Scovill will go to the second team.

Canapary Declared Eligible

Canapary made his appearance at Baker Field for the first time last week and his presence boosted the Lion's stock of eligible players, though inasmuch as he was declared eligible to represent the local eleven by the registrar. Canapary was captain in 1919, but was dropped from the squad by Head Coach Fred Dawson. The dropping of the Morningide Heights star caused a big howl on the part of the student body, but the coach was up to his usual authority and shortly
